Secretary Herbert has initiated the policy referred to in his annual report of reducing the woodwork aboard men-of-war by appointing a board consisting of Commander Bradford and Constructors Hanscom and Bowles to consider the subject, and taking up the designs of our warships in detail, to report wherein reductions of joinerwork can be made in each case.

THEIR FIRST HAOLE GARMENTS

Natives in the New Hebrides Are "Nicely Dressed."

One Man Attired in a Snow White Vest -Another Has a Skirt Pinned Around His Neck.

The world is familiar with the incidents narrated by Dr. J. G. Paton of his life in the New Hebrides, and will be glad to know that Mrs. Paton has prepared a volume entitled "Letters and Sketches from the New Hebrides," soon to be published, says the Missionary Herald. One incident which she tells is amusing in itself, and illustrates the entire absorption of her husband, the missi, as the natives call him, in the great purpose he had in view, so that he entirely overlooked the comicality of the scene which so impressed his good wife. Here is Mrs. Paton's story: "The trial to my risibles I found it hardest to bear was that which befel me especially on Sabbaths. The first of these days in particular presented a ludicrous scene in the way of dress, and it was only by a most desperate effort that I could manage to keep a long face while watching the natives coming into the church. We had arrived on a Tuesday; a number of garments had been distributed From Hawaii, per stmr Iwalani, Feb 15— H P Baldwin. Dr P H Bresle, H Totten-heim, Geo F Nelson, Arch Hugh, and 23 on to thirty turned out to worship. One man, I remember, came prancing in, looking so delighted with himself in a snow white vest-absolutely nothing else! Another came stalking majestically with a woman's skirt pinned round his throat and the tips of his fingers appearing at the bottom of it. A third had a native bag done up so as to represent a hat, which he took off with quite the air of a gentleman as he entered the door. One man had on a nice little jacket I had presented to his wife; and indeed everyone who wore any clothing at all did so in the ab-The bark Albert will not leave surdest fashion. The effort at selfcontrol was fast becoming unendurable when the worthy missi unintentionally proved 'the last be due at Ho straw.' His face was a picture of on or about adoring thankfulness, and his prophetic soul-unconscious of anything grotesque-saw them already on the way to glory. He whispered: 'O Maggie, shouldn't we be The Wm. G. Irwin and the King grateful to God to see them all Cyrus are side by side at Dilling- coming out to church so nicely ham's wharf.

| dressed?' He was adding some-The James Makee arrived yester- | thing about 'jewels' and 'trophies,' day morning with a cargo of sugar but I was already half way out of the church under cover of a convenient fit of violent coughing, and with the Alice Cooke, H. F. Glade just managed to slip round a corner before going into prolonged convulsions. Pray forgive me; I loved them none the less; but that phrase-so nicely dressed-was rather more than my woman's soul could withstand."
